Please explain how this is/could be achieved (examples might include: curriculum design informed by current research in the subject; practice informed by research; students undertaking research) The influence of research is clear in the programme's teaching modules in which the fact that those teaching on the course are internationally renowned experts in their fields is apparent in the subject material. Also students do a dissertation project in a lab where they are engaged in cutting edge research at first hand.

The assessment methods are very rigorous, they have clear guidelines, and these are adhered to.

There are lots of differences between students, with some very strong, others weaker, but the programme does a very good job of working with students of different experiences / abilities, and I found good evidence that much attention was focused on individual students and their strengths and weaknesses. Please use this box to provide any additional comments you would like to make in relation to assessment and feedback:
